"AGEPI participated in all editions of the Trademark Day with presentations and statistical data on trademark protection in the Republic of Moldova. Lately, it is attested a growing interest of the economic agents in the protection of their trademarks, including abroad. This is also due to the organization of such events. With the globalization of trade, companies must cope with the entirely new technological economic and social requirements, be innovative to gain and retain customers who currently have at hand all the tools to make a choice, including through electronic commerce. However, the success of a trademark is based on the high quality of products or services, and behind a successful brand stands an economic force", said Svetlana Munteanu.

At the same time, the conference was attended by a group of specialists from the Trademarks, Industrial Designs Department, Legal Department and Promotion and Publishing Department of AGEPI.
